CCE BOSTON MUSIC SCHOOL
AT B.C. AND HARVARD

Now in its fourth year, the CCE Boston Music School is in session for the first time at Harvard University. Co-sponsored by the Hanafin-Cooley branch of Comhaltas Ceoltóirí Éireann, the Harvard Celtic Department, and the Irish Studies Program at Boston College, the CCE Boston Music School will provide music instruction at Harvard in the fall and at Boston College in the spring. Students at Harvard and BC— as well as members of the wider New England community—will learn to play traditional Irish instruments such as fiddle, accordion, bodhrán, tin whistle, harp, flute, and Uilleann pipes. For more information on the school and its offerings, contact:

CCE Boston Music School
P.O. Box 823, Westwood, MA 02090
Telephone: (781) 449-3702

FRIENDS OF HARVARD CELTIC STUDIES MEMBERSHIP FORM

Please count me/us as members of the Friends of Harvard Celtic Studies in the category checked below. In addition to the benefits described above, I'll also receive a free subscription to the Friends newsletter.

$100.00 per annum $250.00 per annum $500.00 per annum

Checks should be made payable to The Friends of Harvard Celtic Studies.

Name(s) ________________________________
Affiliation ______________________________
Address __________________________________
City/State/Zip ____________________________
Telephone __________________ Fax __________ e-mail __________

If you have questions about the Friends of Harvard Celtic Studies, please call 617-496-6305. Return this form to: Margo Grantors, Administrator, Friends of Harvard Celtic Studies, Warren House, 12 Quincy Street, Cambridge, MA 02138

FRIENDS OF HARVARD CELTIC STUDIES

ONE GREAT BANQUET AFTER ANOTHER!

Seems like it was just the other night we were gathering in Loeb House to fête our popular Irish Consul General, Orla O’Hanrahan, and her husband, Claude Malone, on the imminent conclusion of a highly successful tour of duty here in Boston. A crisp December evening with the holidays in the offing set the mood. A sumptuous formal dinner, sparkling company, warm words, and genuine affection made for a splendidly memorable occasion. Since then, happily, her government has asked Orla to stay on till next year, so we don’t have to face losing her for a little while yet.

Guest of Honor, Consul General Orla O’Hanrahan, with John Callinan (left) and Fred Cogin.

Lovely smiles and outfits to match. (l to r) Diddy Callinan, Jane Driscoll, and Ginny Kane.

Claude Malone, UK Consul General George Ferguson and Mrs. (Margaret) Ferguson, and Professor Tomás O’Cathasaigh.

Dan and Janie (Scott) Murphy,our former editor.

Our good friends, Joseph Rocchio and Mary Crosson.
MISSION STATEMENT

The Friends of Harvard Celtic Studies was formed in 1993 to participate in and support the numerous programs and activities of Harvard’s Celtic Department. The Friends’ primary mission is to help fund the following programs:

- Stipends for students attending intensive language courses in Ireland, Scotland, Wales, and Brittany
- Honoria for visiting artists and scholars
- Travel support for students attending conferences or workshops devoted to Celtic cultures
- Assistance to middle and high school teachers in introducing Celtic literature and history to their students
- Publications relating to research in the Celtic cultures

An important goal of the Friends is to make accessible to the community a large and assorted presentation of Celtic culture and scholarship, and to encourage non-academic members of the area’s large Celtic community to participate in Harvard Celtic activities. We welcome anyone who appreciates Celtic culture and who wishes to participate in its dissemination.

FRIENDS EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

Chairmen: Phyllis Haughey, Jack Reardon

University Liaisons: Elizabeth Gray, Seamus Malin

Public Relations Committee: Kate O’Kelly, Michael Quinnin

Development Committee: Mary MacMillen

Program Committee: Joyce Flynn

http://www.fas.harvard.edu/~celt_fes/

Co-Editors: Gene Hiley and Michael Quinnin

Editorial Assist.: Marlo Granberry

Photographer: Sandie Michalec-Alex

Printer: Harvard Printing & Publications

‘C’ IS FOR CÉILI, CAVORTING, AND CEÓL!

March 1, 2001 saw another Friends céili, gathering to help push the winter along out of here. As usual, Dillon Field House was warmed by a blazing fire, good spirits of every definition, and traditional music from the whole range of Celtic venues. Local Friends talent was handsomely supplemented by Seamus Connolly and musicians from Boston College and Comhaltas Ceoltóirí Éireann.

As the pictures show, a good time was had by all, thereby whetting Friends’ appetites for the Céilí of 2002, slated for Thursday, February 28, at 7 PM in the Dillon Lounge.

THE GLORIES OF IRELAND PAST AND PRESENT

That was the theme of this year’s Harvard Alumni Association trip led by Patrick and Chadine Ford. Ireland Past was represented by visits to the medieval monasteries of Monasterboice, Glendalough, and Clonmacnoise, the geological wonders of the Giant’s Causeway (Co. Antrim) and the Burren (Co. Clare), and other sites. Ireland Present included visits to Armagh and its twin Protestant and Catholic cathedrals, a private tour of the magnificent Belfast City Hall, and an exuberant Bloom’s Day in Dublin, which included stops at the Joyce Center for some Guinness, readings, and street theatre, and the Martello Tower in Sandycove. Other highlights included a sober tour of Bushmills Distillery and a dinner evening with well-known Ulster artist Ross Wilson exhibiting and discussing his work.

WELCOME, NEW GRAD STUDENTS, TOO!

Joining the Celtic Department to pursue graduate studies this year are Ms. Amanda Price and Mr. Aidan Grey. Amanda completed her BA in English at the U. of Central Florida (Orlando) in 2001. She has studied Welsh, Irish and Greek, working with self-teaching materials; other languages include French, Spanish, German. Interests include Irish verse, folklore, dream lore, linguistics, representations of women in Irish verse and folklore (especially as hags, maidens, and shapeshifters). Aidan received his BA Magna Cum Laude in Religious Studies from the U. of Colorado, Boulder in 1999. His honors thesis was on the Elements of Shamanism in Celtic Mythology. He has studied several languages independently (Irish, Welsh, Old Irish, Breton, Finnish) and while in the Navy served as a translator of Mandarin Chinese. Interests include: Celtic languages, shamanistic mythology, Scandinavian languages and literatures, religious studies.

WELCOME, NEW FRIENDS!

Warmest of welcomes to those who joined us in 2001. You are now members of a growing international community of Friends who support Celtic scholarship here at Harvard. To you and all our membership, our gratitude and sincerest thanks.

Sincerely,

Mr. Robert T. Butler
Mr. Thomas F. Clark
Mr. & Mrs. Paul R. Corcoran, Jr.
Mr. David J. Fanning
Mr. Philip C. Haughey, Jr.
Mr. & Mrs. Joel M. Reisman
Ms. Elizabeth Shannon
HE-E-E-E-RE’S HANNAH!
Assistant Professor Barbara Hillers and husband Roni Khardon announce the birth of Hannah Hadass Hillers on September 8, 2001. Weighing in at 3.5 Kg (7lbs 11oz), Hannah was 50cm (20 in.) long at birth, and Roni reports that, like her mother, she “has black hair, a delightful disposition,” and in addition “makes adonable miaowing noises.”
At press time, we are all looking forward to meeting little Hannah and helping her get started on a successful recording career.

DR. CHADBOURNE, THE MABINOGI AND MORE
This Fall, the Department is delighted to have Dr. Kathryn Chadbourne back in our midst, offering Celtic 138: The Mabinogi and Other Medieval Welsh Tales. Her course provides close reading of “The Four Branches of the Mabinogi,” plus the four so-called “Native” tales, the three Romances, and the related “Tale of Owain Bach” and “Tale of Taliesin.”
The aim is to enhance appreciation of these stories by developing a critical awareness of their structures, narrative techniques, themes and characters; and by learning about the theories, methods, and approaches that other scholars have brought to bear on them.

Questions of origin and transmission of the tales will also be considered, as well as their relationship to oral tradition, their folklore content, and their status as “mythic narratives.”

Students, it is hoped, will acquire tools to enable their own informed analyses of the Four Branches and the related tales.

DR. HALEY REINSTATES EARLY IRISH HISTORY
Not since Professor John V. Kelleher retired in 1986 has instruction in the earliest period of Irish history been available at Harvard — an unfortunate hiatus, finally ended this fall.
Gene C. Haley, member of the Friends steering committee and Lecturer on Celtic Languages and Literatures this term, is conducting Celtic 107: Early Irish History, a course designed primarily for undergraduates. Graduate students from a number of disciplines (including, of course, Celtic Studies) are also in attendance.

Dr. Haley was a student under Professor Kelleher, served for some ten years as his teaching assistant for both Irish history and Irish literature courses in the Harvard Extension, and gave courses of his own there in Celtic mythology and Celtic literature in translation. His particular expertise is in Irish onomastics, especially identification of the hundreds of placenames in Táin Bó Cúailnge, Cattle-Raid of Cooley, the central saga of the Ulster Cycle of tales.
The new course covers the years from the introduction of Christianity to the Anglo-Norman conquest (c. 400 to 1170 AD), tracing social, political, and religious developments, the arguments constructed to explain them, and the effects on those arguments of new archaeological and epidemiological evidence.

WONG BOOK TICKLES TÁIN BUFFS
On April 5th (just four days after you know what), a roomful of Harvard and Boston College colleagues gathered at BC’s Connolly House to celebrate the launch of a new book by Dr. Donna Wong.
Táin Ríuttaípach Cúailnge (loosely, ‘The Rustling of the Rutableas of Cooley’) is a brilliant and irreverent parody of the great Irish epic Táin Bó Cúailnge (TBC), with a contemporary pseudo-health-conscious twist. It is mischievously illustrated as well by Bill Gouldy, an Oklahoma City high school teacher, who was a member of Patrick Ford’s first National Endowment for the Humanities seminar on TBC for secondary school teachers in 1994. Professor Ford was on hand for the launch with congratulations for both author and artist.

An associate of the Celtic Department, Donna Wong received her Ph.D. in English and Celtic Literatures from Harvard in 1997. Since then she has taught courses in the Irish language here as well as at Boston College.

Professor Philip O’Leary of the Irish Studies Program at Boston College has called Donna’s book “a marvelous romp, a bang-on parody rooted in a deep and vibrant understanding of the original medieval text — not to mention of Irish literature right up to the present — and a wicked eye for the fatuity just below the surface of our own trendy pieties!”

Free Sample!
“Now the invasion of Ulster would have been a snap were it not for the Rookie of the Heroic Age, a precocious, steroid-free, all-around sportsman named Cú Chulaind, formerly known as Sétanta, because his official job was maintaining the road system of Ulster. During his daily review of the meter-readings and toll-fees, he observed that although it was months before cuckoo would call, a great number of poets and historians and oral-literary critics had recently crossed from Ulster into Connacht. It seemed to him that only an impending disaster could secure sabbaticals for so many professional scholars at the beginning of the school year. Since no king was due to die a three-fold death, nor any love-triangle to lose a vertex through betrayal, he concluded that Medb and Ailill were preparing to engage in aerobic exercise that would not be to the benefit of Ulster.”

ORDER YOURS
Copies of Dr. Wong’s opus may be ordered from Buile Books, a division of Ford & Bailie, Publishers, P.O. Box 138, Belmont, MA 02478-0002, Tel: 617-489-6635.
Friends of the Year: Phil O’Leary and Joyce Flynn

It was a very special evening that marked the honoring of Phil and Joyce as ‘Friends of the Year’ on May 10. These two have made many contributions to Celtic Studies and to the community. Joyce received her Ph.D. from Harvard in English and Celtic Literatures; in fact, hers was the first-ever joint graduate degree in these two fields. Her special interest is drama, and she has advised several student drama groups here at Harvard and elsewhere. In 1996, she taught two courses in the Celtic Department, one of which is the subject of a book that will be submitted to Cambridge University Press, “The Drama of Ethnic Renaissance: Playwriting and Audiences in Early Twentieth-Century Dublin and Harlem.”

Joyce’s support of Celtic Studies at Harvard goes well beyond these achievements. On that memorable evening in October of 1993, when the ‘Friends’ organization was officially launched, Joyce was the first in line with her membership subscription. For several years now, she has served on the ‘Friends’ steering committee and in that capacity has been responsible for shaping a number of our programs, in particular those involving theatre outings.

Phil received his Ph.D. from the Harvard Celtic Department in 1978. As Professor of Irish Studies at Boston College he has made an enormous contribution to our field in the local community. More importantly, he has been the key linking Celtic Studies at Harvard with Irish Studies at Boston College. These two programs are the most distinguished of their kinds in this country (and beyond!) and complement one another perfectly. Phil saw that close cooperation between our programs could enhance each of them, and he has worked to ensure that Harvard Celtic students have access to courses in Irish Studies at Boston College and that his own students are welcomed in Celtic courses at Harvard. Joyce and Phil have both been active as scholars and have published a considerable amount of their research. Phil’s ambitious study, Ideology and Innovation: The Prose Literature of the Gaelic Revival, 1881-1921, was honored in America by the American Conference for Irish Studies (ACIS) and in Ireland by the Irish Times.

Fittingly, this special evening was attended by friends of both Harvard Celtic Studies and the Irish Studies Program at Boston College. Music was provided by BC’s Seamus Connolly and Larry Reynolds of Comhaltas Ceoltoiri Eireann.
Friends of the Year: Phil O’Leary and Joyce Flynn.

It was a very special evening that marked the honoring of Phil and Joyce as ‘Friends of the Year’ on May 10. These two have made many contributions to Celtic Studies and to the community. Joyce received her Ph.D. from Harvard in English and Celtic Literatures; in fact, hers was the first-ever joint graduate degree in these two fields. Her special interest is drama, and she has advised several student drama groups here at Harvard and elsewhere. In 1996, she taught two courses in the Celtic Department, one of which is the subject of a book that will be submitted to Cambridge University Press, “The Drama of Ethnic Renaissance: Playwriting and Audiences in Early Twentieth-Century Dublin and Harlem.”

Joyce’s support of Celtic Studies at Harvard goes well beyond these achievements. On that memorable evening in October of 1993, when the ‘Friends’ organization was officially launched, Joyce was the first in line with her membership subscription. For several years now, she has served on the ‘Friends’ steering committee and in that capacity has been responsible for shaping a number of our programs, in particular those involving theatre outings.

Phil received his Ph.D. from the Harvard Celtic Department in 1978. As Professor of Irish Studies at Boston College he has made an enormous contribution to our field in the local community. More importantly, he has been the key linking Celtic Studies at Harvard with Irish Studies at Boston College. These two programs are the most distinguished of their kinds in this country (and beyond!) and complement one another perfectly. Phil saw that close cooperation between our programs could enhance each of them, and he has worked to ensure that Harvard Celtic students have access to courses in Irish Studies at Boston College and that his own students are welcomed in Celtic courses at Harvard. Joyce and Phil have both been active as scholars and have published a considerable amount of their research. Phil’s ambitious study, Ideology and Innovation: The Prose Literature of the Gaelic Revival, 1881-1921, was honored in America by the American Conference for Irish Studies (ACIS) and in Ireland by the Irish Times.

Fittingly, this special evening was attended by friends of both Harvard Celtic Studies and the Irish Studies Program at Boston College. Music was provided by BC’s Seamus Connolly and Larry Reynolds of Comhaltas Ceoltoiri Éireann.
HEE-HATEE–RE'S HANNAH!
Assistant Professor Barbara Hillers and husband Roni Khardon announce the birth of Hannah Laddie Hillers on September 8, 2001. Weighing in at 3.5 Kg (7lbs 1 oz), Hannah was 50cm (20 in) long at birth, and Roni reports that, like her mother, she 'has black hair, a delightful disposition,' and in addition 'makes adorable miaowing noises.'
At press time, we are all looking forward to meeting little Hannah and helping her get started on a successful recording career.

DR. CHADBORNE, THE MABINOGI AND MORE
This Fall, the Department is delighted to have Dr. Kathryn Chadbourne back in our midst, offering Celtic 136: The Mabinogi and Other Medieval Welsh Tales. Her course provides close reading of 'The Four Branches of the Mabinogi,' plus the four so-called 'Native' tales, the three Romances, and the related 'Tale of Gwion Bach' and 'Tale of Taliesin.'
The aim is to enhance appreciation of these stories by developing a critical awareness of their structures, narrative techniques, themes and characters; and by learning about the theories, methods, and approaches that other scholars have brought to bear on them.

Questions of origin and transmission of the tales will also be considered, as well as their relationship to oral tradition, their folklore content, and their status as 'mythic narratives.'

Students, it is hoped, will acquire tools to enable their own informed analyses of the Four Branches and the related tales.

DR. HALEY REINSTATES EARLY IRISH HISTORY
Not since Professor John V. Kelleher retired in 1986 has instruction in the earliest period of Irish history been available at Harvard—a most unfortunate hiatus, finally ended this fall.
Gene B. Haley, member of the Friends steering committee and Lecturer on Celtic Languages and Literatures this term, is conducting Celtic 107: Early Irish History, a course designed primarily for undergraduates. Graduate students from a number of disciplines (including, of course, Celtic Studies) are also in attendance.
Dr. Haley was a student under Professor Kelleher, served for some ten years as his teaching assistant for both Irish history and Irish literature courses in the Harvard Extension, and gave courses of his own there in Celtic mythology and Celtic literature in translation. His particular expertise is in Irish onomastics, especially identification of the hundreds of placenames in Táin Bó Cúailnge, Cattle-Raid of Cooley, the central saga of the Ulster Cycle of tales.
The new course covers the years from the introduction of Christianity to the Anglo-Norman conquest (c. 400 to 1170 AD), tracing social, political, and religious developments, the arguments constructed to explain them, and the effects on those arguments of new archaeological and epidemiological evidence.

WONG BOOK TICKLES TÁIN BUFFS
On April 5th (just four days after you know what), a roomful of Harvard and Boston College colleagues gathered at BC's Connolly House to celebrate the launch of a new book by Dr. Donna Wong.
Táin Útubpa Cúailnge (loosely, 'The Rustling of the Rutabagas of Cooley') is a brilliant and irreverent parody of the great Irish epic Táin Bó Cúailnge (TBC), with a contemporary pseudo-health-conscious twist. It is mischievously illustrated as well by Bill Gouly, an Oklahoma City high school teacher, who was a member of Patrick Ford's first National Endowment for the Humanities seminar on TBC for secondary school teachers in 1994. Professor Ford was on hand for the launch with congratulations for both author and artist.

An associate of the Celtic Department, Donna Wong received her Ph.D. in English and Celtic Literatures from Harvard in 1997. Since then she has taught courses in the Irish language here as well as at Boston College.

Professor Philip O'Leary of the Irish Studies Program at Boston College has called Donna’s book “a marvelous romp, a bang-on parody rooted in a deep and vibrant understanding of the original medieval text—not to mention Irish literature right up to the present—and a wicked eye for the fatuity just below the surface of our own trendy piety!”

Free Sample!
“Now the invasion of Ulster would have been a snap were it not for the Rookie of the Heroic Age, a precocious, steroid-free, all-around sporto named Cú Chulaind, formerly known as Sétanta, because his official job was maintaining the road system of Ulster. During his daily review of the meter-readings and toll-fees, he observed that although it was months before cuckoo would call, a great number of poets and historians and oral-literary critics had recently crossed from Ulster into Connacht. It seemed to him that only an impending disaster could secure sabbatics for so many professional scholars at the beginning of the school year. Since no king was due to die a three-fold death, nor any love-triangle to lose a vertex through betrayal, he concluded that Medb and Ailill were preparing to engage in aerobic exercise that would not be to the benefit of Ulster.”

ORDER YOURS
Copies of Dr. Wong’s opus may be ordered from Buile Books, a division of Ford & Bailie, Publishers, P.O. Box 138, Belmont, MA 02478-0002, Tel: 617-489-6635.
March 1, 2001 saw another Friends céilí, gathering to help push the winter along out of here. As usual, Dillon Field House was warmed by a blazing fire, good spirits of every definition, and traditional music from the whole range of Celtic venues. Local Friends talent was handsomely supplemented by Seamus Connolly and musicians from Boston College and Comhaltas Ceoltoiri Éireann.

As the pictures show, a good time was had by all, thereby whetting Friends’ appetites for the Céilí of 2002, slated for Thursday, February 28, at 7 PM in the Dillon Lounge.

That was the theme of this year’s Harvard Alumni Association trip led by Patrick and Chadine Ford. Ireland Past was represented by visits to the medieval monasteries of Monasterbóice, Glendalough, and Clonmacnoise, the geological wonders of the Giant’s Causeway (Co. Antrim) and the Burren (Co. Clare), and other sites. Ireland Present included visits to Armagh and its twin Protestant and Catholic cathedrals, a private tour of the magnificent Belfast City Hall, and an exuberant Bloom’s Day in Dublin, which included stops at the Joyce Center for some Guinness, readings, and street theatre, and the Martello Tower in Sandycove. Other highlights included a sober tour of Bushmills Distillery and a dinner evening with well-known Ulster artist Ross Wilson exhibiting and discussing his work.

Welcome, New Grad Students, Too!

Joining the Celtic Department to pursue graduate studies this year are Ms. Amanda Price and Mr. Aidan Grey. Amanda completed her BA in English at the U. of Central Florida (Orlando) in 2001. She has studied Welsh, Irish and Greek, working with self-teaching materials; other languages include French, Spanish, German. Interests include Irish verse, folklore, dream lore, linguistics, representations of women in Irish verse and folklore (especially as hags, maidens, and shapeshifters). Aidan received his B.A. Magna Cum Laude in Religious Studies from the U. of Colorado, Boulder in 1999. His honors thesis was on the Elements of Shamanism in Celtic Mythology. He has studied several languages independently (Irish, Welsh, Old Irish, Breton, Finnish) and while in the Navy served as a translator of Mandarin Chinese. Interests include: Celtic languages, shamanistic mythology, Scandinavian languages and literatures, religious studies.

Welcome, New Friends!

Warmest of welcomes to those who joined us in 2001. You are now members of a growing international community of Friends who support Celtic scholarship here at Harvard. To you and all our membership, our gratitude and sincerest thanks.

Sincerely,
Mr. Robert T. Butler
Mr. Thomas P. Clark
Mr. & Mrs. Paul R. Corcoran, Jr.
Mr. David J. Fanning
Mr. Philip C. Haughey, Jr.
Mr. & Mrs. Joel M. Reisman
Ms. Elizabeth Shannon
CCE BOSTON MUSIC SCHOOL
AT B.C. AND HARVARD

Now in its fourth year, the CCE Boston Music School is in session for the first time at Harvard University. Co-sponsored by the Hanafin-Cooley branch of Comhaltas Ceoltóirí Eireann, the Harvard Celtic Department, and the Irish Studies Program at Boston College, the CCE Boston Music School will provide music instruction at Harvard in the fall and at Boston College in the spring. Students at Harvard and BC — as well as members of the wider New England community — will learn to play traditional Irish instruments such as fiddle, accordion, bodhrán, tin whistle, harp, flute, and Uilleann pipes. For more information on the school and its offerings, contact:

CCE Boston Music School
P.O. Box 823, Westwood, MA 02090
Telephone: (978) 549-3702

FOR UNDERGRADS, CÉILÍS OF OUR OWN

The Harvard Celtic Society is an undergraduate organization devoted to bringing Celtic culture to Harvard. With our weekly cèilís, occasional instructional seminars, and special events such as the Highland Games and a St. Patrick’s Day concert, the Society aims to share with the Harvard community the musical and ethnic heritage of the world’s several Celtic cultures. The Celtic Society also performs traditional music at private engagements and Harvard functions. For more information please visit our website at www.bcsl.harvard.edu/~celts, or email us at celts@bcsl.harvard.edu.

Beannachtat!

FRIENDS OF HARVARD CELTIC STUDIES MEMBERSHIP FORM

Please count me/us as members of the Friends of Harvard Celtic Studies in the category checked below. In addition to the benefits described above, I’ll also receive a free subscription to the Friends newsletter.

Friend $100.00 per annum  Patron $250.00 per annum  Benefactor $500.00 per annum

Checks should be made payable to The Friends of Harvard Celtic Studies.

Name(s) ____________________________________________________________
Affiliation __________________________________________________________
Address ____________________________________________________________
City/State/Zip _______________________________________________________

Telephone ___________________________ Fax _____________________________

If you have questions about the Friends of Harvard Celtic Studies, please call 617-496-6205. Return this form to:
Margo Granfors, Administrator, Friends of Harvard Celtic Studies, Warren House, 12 Quincy Street, Cambridge, MA 02138

FRIENDS OF HARVARD CELTIC STUDIES

ONE GREAT BANQUET AFTER ANOTHER!

Seems like it was just the other night we were gathering in Loeb House to fete our popular Irish Consul General, Orla O’Hanrahan, and her husband, Claude Malone, on the imminent conclusion of a highly successful tour of duty here in Boston. A crisp December evening with the holidays in the offing set the mood. A sumptuous formal dinner, sparkling company, warm words, and genuine affection made for a splendidly memorable occasion. Since then, happily, her government has asked Orla to stay on till next year, so we don’t have to face losing her a little while yet.